Teaching theories: educational psychology Traditional theories Mental-discipline theories. The earliest mental-discipline theories of teaching were based on a premise that the main justification for teaching anything is not for itself but for what it trains—intelligence, attitudes, and values. By choosing the right material and by emphasizing rote methods of learning, according to that theory ...

Pedagogy - Teaching theories: educational psychology ...

Actually, we would take Brookfield's metaphor a step further, because for most new psychology faculty, teaching is the equivalent of white-water rafting without a guide. As mentioned in Chapter 1, unlike our colleagues in elementary and secondary education, psychology faculty enter the classroom with little or no training in the theory and practice of teaching.
